THE ROLE OF INTERACTIVE METHODS IN TEACHING PROCESS

Annotation: The article describes the effectiveness of interactive teaching in educational process and the advantages of this techniques. The author states a number of methods used in the classroom.

Key words: interactive technique, educational process, multimedia, work in groups, students-students, individual input.

“Preparing well-qualified and educated youth must be our main responsibility”

I.A. Karimov

It is important to mention that, education is an integral part of growing the youth. Namely, being educated is the greatest demand of the present day. Even though it is mentioned that, “Study, study and study”.

The system of education is the complex process. In order that the increase of the quality of education is the main task of the government. So different secular subjects, especially languages, are being taught. As it is said that, “Great minds think alike” (Olim bo’lsang, olam seniki).

In teaching process, as well as teaching foreign languages, new approaches used to increase the quality of education. For instance, interactive methods or interactive techniques.

Interactive methods - stimulate the interaction between pupils and a teacher and increase the effectiveness of teaching. Interact means “cooperate” and “act together”.

In other words interactive techniques are aimed not only at interaction by a teacher and students but also at interaction between students. In interactive teaching, all students are involved in educational process. It means that everybody contributes individually, exchange with knowledge, ideas and types of activity, wide an outlook, think and conclude individually.

Interactive teaching include various beneficial for teachers to organize a lesson a lesson and teamwork. It encourages learners to take various data by sound and visual type mode. The pictures animation, photo, sound, text in interactive operating create an untraditional environment.

Multimedia in foreign languages promote the increase of interaction of educational process and understand the subject.

There are some kinds of interactive methods or techniques in teaching process:

1. Think/ Pair/ Share;
2. Work in groups;
3. Case study;
4. Question & Answer period;
5. Short wrting exercises;
6. Note review;
7. Demonstration.

Working in groups is the workhorse of interactive teaching. Work groups should be standard in every training program. Using work groups in teaching you gain the followings:

- Stimulates individual input;
- Learners obtain feedback from multiple data;
- Allows you to evaluate their learning.

Role play is a communicative, playing and educational activity. It is an activity when students have different parts. There are many kinds of role plays at English lessons: presentation, round-table discussion, interview, fairytale and etc. It gives learners the possibility to show the creativity and acting techniques.

All in all, interactive methods or techniques are improvised technique having untraditional structure. The use of interactive methods improves the quality of educational process and understanding the information deeply. These techniques help learners to gain the following skills

- Developing communicative skills;
- Improving educational skill;
- Providing necessary information;
- Increasing the interaction not only teachers and students but also students-students.

I can say without any hesitation that, interactive approaches are highly useful for teachers and students and it can encourage students to attend and to be actively in classroom.
